

ALLIED HEALTHCARE

Part of our Professional Lines Series

The U.S. service economy is growing rapidly and the Allied Health field is no exception. As our growing and aging society continues at a brisk pace, more and more businesses have professional liability exposures. Designed for small to medium health care and medical care providers, eligibility includes nearly 100 classes from home health aides, kidney dialysis centers to karate and yoga instructors.

Healthcare is increasingly provided by sources other than the traditional physician and hospital. Projected shortages of physicians will increase the demand for non-traditional providers. Healthcare in the future will emphasize cost savings which will create more demand for lower cost alternatives. New types of healthcare and wellness programs will continue expanding. According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, by 2020 home health and personal care aides will have increased by more than 1.3 million—a 70 percent increase from 2010.

Our Allied Healthcare professional liability solution allows you to respond to this rapidly growing sector of this economy. Working with you in a ground-up quota share basis, we're pleased to help you protect, expand or grow your current business.

Designed for small to medium health care and medical service providers

Broad eligibility and in-house authority

Claims-made trigger for most classes; Occurrence available for select classes

CLAIMS EXAMPLES

Dietician

A dietician improperly explained a structured diet plan to their client after they had colon surgery. The client suffered severe complications due to their improper diet plan and the dietician was sued for negligence.

Home Health Aide

A developmentally disabled client requires twenty four hour assistance. Unable to communicate, the client was not able to alert the aide that the bath water was too hot. The client suffered significant burns and permanent scarring. The aide was sued for negligence.
